

WHEN I NEED HELP OFFERS FULL SUITE of SERVICES, INCLUDING CONSULTING

How else can WINH help you today?

...The morning of your first event day, you rush into the convention center copy store with a flash drive (either because your shipment of brochures did not arrive on time or because you just finished designing these materials ten minutes ago). Then you pay a small fortune to make the number of copies you need (typically not even at the quality you would have preferred), spend the next thirty minutes cutting and folding, and rush to your booth so you can arrange your marketing materials to look "good enough" and open in time for the start of the event.

Sound familiar?

This is typical for many exhibitors but all of the added stress and compromise that comes with rushing around the morning of to create and print your marketing materials is completely unnecessary because When I Need Help offers reasonably priced professional printing services. Whether your marketing materials are fine the way they are, could benefit from a bit of refreshing, or need to be created from scratch, When I Need Help can design and print your items before you arrive on-site for your next event. That means you can spend that first morning eating a real breakfast, meeting with a client, or even arranging your display to look better than just good enough.

Utilizing the skills and experience of When I Need Help to create your press releases, design your brochures and other handouts, and develop presentations to support your efforts gives you more time to focus on your clients, other important parts of your job, and to relax with your family and friends. In providing quality consulting services, your company's image and message clarity are always the main focus. You can trust that everything you have requested will be professionally prepared and delivered, not only on time, but also on budget.

Beyond that, if you are not quite certain that your company is achieving the return on investment you are capable of for your events, trust When I Need Help to evaluate your booth set-up and on-site practices and then to assist you in making the necessary improvements to ensure your future success.

In conjunction with or apart from the on-site, event hostessing you have enjoyed over the past year, When I Need Help offers a full suite of services customized according to your specific needs.
